III--SILVER STAR. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 9 July 1918, a Silver Star for gallantry in action is awarded to:

Captain George M. Buck, , Army Intelligence and Security, United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action while engaged in military operations in Vietnam on 24 February 1964. While serving as an Advisor and accompanying a reconnaissance company on a mission in support of operations in the Republic of Vietnam, Captain Buck heard an explosion followed by the sound of rifle and small arms fire approximately 6 kilometers from his location. He immediately advised his counterpart to send the unit to the ambush site and, upon arrival, it was discovered that the Vietnamese elements were engaged in battle with the hostile forces that had blown up one of the supply trucks in a convoy of the friendly forces. During the engagement, Captain Buck bravely exposed himself to heavy small arms fire while assuming a forward position to advise and encourage the Vietnamese forces to pursue their objective. As the battle progressed and the hostile forces were repelled considerably, Captain Buck spotted one of the enemy attempting an escape by advancing through the friendly lines. Then, with complete disregard for his own personal safety, he fearlessly ignored the fire fight all around him and tackled the enemy soldier, taking him alive for interrogation. By his courageous example, sound advice, and professional skill, he inspired his Vietnamese counterparts to pursue their efforts in the defense of their homeland. Captain Buck's conspicuous gallantry is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Captain John E. Eshelman, , Infantry, United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action while engaged in military operations in Vietnam on the 19th and 20th of October 1963. While participating in a military operation an advisor to a Vietnamese battalion, Captain Eshelman accompanied the first airlift of a large force into a heliborne landing zone. After an advance of 200 meters, the unit came under intense automatic weapons, mortar, and small arms fire from hostile forces entrenched in prepared and concealed positions. In the hail of gunfire which followed the initial onslaught that wounded and killed many of the friendly forces, he unhestitatingly and bravely moved over the open terrain from position to position to encourage the Vietnamese commander and the troops to pursue their efforts. Despite personal wounds in the hand and chest, Captain Eshelman continued to provide assistance and professional advice throughout the entire morning, inspiring the greatly depleted force to follow his example and to take their objective. When another American advisor with reinforcements appeared on the scene, he refused evacuation, remained with the unit under continuous gunfire throughout the day and night, and continued his valiant efforts until the hostile action diminished on the following morning before he accepted evacuation for treatment of his wounds. Captain Eshelman's conspicuous gallantry and unselfish actions are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Private First Class Robert A. Graupman, , United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action while engaged in military operations in Vietnam on 30 August 1963. As a crewmember on board a CH–21 Helicopter, Private Graupman was participating in a mission to support the ground forces of the Army of the Republic of Vietnam when another United States Army helicopter crashed in the midst of extremely heavy hostile gunfire. As soon as his pilot landed the helicopter in the combat zone to assist in the evacuation of the crewmembers and equipment of the downed aircraft, Private Graupman swiftly left the aircraft, ran through the intense gunfire, and assisted in evacuating an injured crew member. He then continued to display his fortitude and complete disregard for his own personal safety by returning to the wreckage to assist in carrying a second injured man away from the flanking gunfire. Throughout the remainder of the hazardous operation, he covered his fellow soldiers with his personal weapon until the rescue mission was completed. Private Graupman's unselfish actions and conspicuous gallantry in this dangerous situation are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

Specialist four Norman H. Guthrie, , United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action while engaged in military operations in Vietnam on 30 August 1963. As Crew Chief on board a CH-21 Helicopter, Specialist Guthrie was participating in a mission to support the ground forces of the Army of the Republic of Vietnam when another United States Army helicopter crashed in the midst of extremely heavy hostile gunfire. As soon as his pilot landed the helicopter in the combat zone to assist in the evacuation of the crewmembers and equipment of the downed aircraft, Specialist Guthrie swiftly left the aircraft, ran through the intense gunfire, and assisted in evacuating an injured crewmember. He then continued to display his fortitude and complete disregard for his own personal safety by returning to the wreckage to assist in carrying a second injured man away from the flanking gunfire. After the injured personnel were on board his helicopter, he ignored the bullets passing through the aircraft and administered first aid to the wounded until relieved by a doctor at a medical aid station. Specialist Guthrie's unselfish actions and conspicuous gallantry in this hazardous situation are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

First Lieutenant Hershell B. Murray, , Artillery, United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action while engaged in military operations in Vietnam on 8 March 1964. Lieutenant Murray was serving as Assistant Battalion Advisor to a ranger battalion of the armed forces of the Republic of Vietnam when the unit suddenly came under attack from hostile forces and suffered heavy casualties. Lieutenant Murray then displayed fortitude, professional skill, and complete disregard for his own personal safety by exposing himself to sniper fire while assisting in the construction of a helicopter pad for the evacuation of the wounded. To bring the helicopter into the small landing area, he exposed himself to the increasing gunfire and sustained a bullet wound. Despite his personal inqury, he continued his courageous efforts during the second helicopter evacuation and talked on the radio to guide the pilots away from the strong points of the hostile forces. Lieutenant Murray's conspicuous gallantry is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Sergeant First Class Ralph Rhoden, , United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action while engaged in military operations in Vietnam on 8 March 1964. Sergeant Rhoden was serving as an Advisor to a ranger battalion of the armed forces of the Republic of Vietnam when the unit suddenly came under attack from hostile forces and suffered heavy casualties. During the ensuing engagement, Sergeant Rhoden displayed fortitude, professional skill, and complete disregard for his own personal safety by exposing himself to the small arms and automatic weapons as he advised the rangers in the employment of their weapons. He then assisted in moving to a relatively safe area where preparations were made for a helicopter evacuation landing site, and although the hostile forces soon located the working party, the construction continued despite the intense sniper fire. While waiting for the helicopter, he courageously stood apart from the wounded to draw the enemy fire toward himself, and when the helicopter arrived, he continued to expose himself to the gunfire to help load the wounded. During the second evacuation operation, he completely ignored the hail of bullets striking close to his body as he guided the helicopter to the landing pad. Sergeant Rhoden's conspicuous gallantry is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

Captain William J. Thompson, , Infantry, United States Army, distinguished himself by gallantry in action while engaged in military operations in Vietnam on 25 April 1964. As a Senior Advisor to a battalion of the armed forces of the Republic of Vietnam, Captain Thompson displayed fortitude, professional skill, and perseverance during a military operation. When the lead elements of the battalion were subjected to hostile small arms fire, he voluntarily proceeded to the forward position where four armored scout carriers were halted, and attempted to reorganize the dispersed Vietnamese units with the mission of retrieving their equipment, dead, and wounded. Through his courageous personal example, he succeeded in rallying the components and in encouraging them to move forward again. Then, with complete disregard for his own personal safety, he led this force forward over open terrain while exposed to the gunfire of the hostile forces well entrenched in rocky and heavily wooded positions on hills which dominated the field of battle. Despite the constant enemy fire, he continued his brave efforts by directing the operations of the friendly units and by assisting them in evacuating their wounded and dead which led to the successful completion of the mission. Captain Thompson's conspicuous gallantry is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.
