I. DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 25 July 1963, the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action is awarded, posthumously, to:

Warrant Officer James D. Eisenhour, United States Army, who distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in action while flying as aircraft commander of a UH-1I helicopter against hostile forces near Hiep Hoa, Republic of Vietnam, on 18 August 1968, in an attempt to rescue a member of a long range reconnaissance patrol who was reported fallen from the extraction helicopter. Three other aircraft had attempted the rescue operation at the expense of two killed and six wounded. Warrant Officer Eisenhour, realizing that survival chances were small, nevertheless volunteered to take his aircraft and crew into the hotly contested landing zone to attempt the rescue. While hovering in the landing zone looking for the lost man, Warrant Officer Eisenhour's aircraft sustained multiple hits from numerous automatic weapons positions. Warrant Officer Eisenhour was fatally wounded. Through his indomitable courage, complete disregard for his own safety, and profound concern for a fellow soldier, he attempted to rescue this individual at the cost of his own life. Warrant Officer Eisenhour's extraordinary heroism and intrepidity are in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflect great credit upon himself and the Armed Forces of his country.

II. DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 25 July 1963, the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action is awarded to:

Captain Oscar L. O'Connor, Infantry, United States Army, who distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in action on 4 November 1967 while serving as Commanding Officer of Company D, 2d Battalion, 7th Cavalry, 1st Cavalry Division. Captain O'Connor was leading two platoons on a search-and-destroy mission near Phan Thiet, Republic of Vietnam, when an abandoned Viet Cong campsite and bunker complex was found. In searching the area, a rice bowl was turned over exposing a hand grenade booby trap. Immediately Captain O'Connor yelled, "Grenade." Everyone rushed to cover and the grenade exploded harmlessly. Captain O'Connor ordered everyone out of the area. He left two engineers to destroy the first bunker and proceeded through very thick undergrowth to the next bunker. While moving through the brush, the pointman tripped a tripwire, releasing a Viet Cong hand grenade wedged in the fork of a bush. The grenade fell to the ground landing in the midst of the element. Realizing that the grenade could destroy all of the men in his element, Captain O'Connor threw his body onto the grenade to smother the blast and yelled, "Grenade." Still expecting the grenade to explode at any instant, he ordered everyone out of the area. Captain O'Connor reached under his body, grasped the grenade and threw it into a bunker opening about five feet away. The grenade exploded instantly it entered the bunker, with the force of the explosion inflicting a minor concussion and fragment wounds in the leg of Captain O'Connor. Captain O'Connor’s extraordinary heroism and willing self-sacrifice are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit on himself, his unit, and the United States Army.

III...DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 9 July 1918, the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in action against an enemy is awarded to:

Captain Phan- Ngoc Luong [redacted] Infantry, Army of the Republic of Vietnam, who distinguished himself by extraordinary heroism in action from 30 January 1968 to 24 February 1968 while serving as Commanding Officer 1st Battalion, 3d Regiment, 1st Army of the Republic of Vietnam Infantry Division. On 31 January 1968 his battalion, composed of two rifle companies and the Headquarters Company, made contact with a numerically superior force consisting of a reinforced North Vietnamese Army battalion. Captain Luong fearlessly exposed himself to enemy fire while traversing the battalion perimeter, directing the fire and encouraging his men. That night, realizing that the North Vietnamese Army battalion had to be diverted from launching an attack against his tenuous position, Captain Luong personally organized and led a platoon-sized combat patrol, infiltrated the North Vietnamese Army lines, and launched a surprise assault on the North Vietnamese Army Battalion Command Post which completely disrupted the enemy. When the North Vietnamese Army Battalion launched their assault on 1 February, Captain Luong positioned himself in the center of the battalion perimeter where, although exposed to intense and accurate enemy fire, he could control the defense. An incoming mortar round exploded less than 5 meters from his position, knocking him to the ground; however he immediately rose and continued to direct the defense. A movement to escape the threatened encirclement of his battalion was begun and the battalion successfully secured a beachhead and started to board junks. At this critical moment a North Vietnamese Army machinegun opened fire on the wading troops, causing panic and confusion. With utter disregard for his personal safety Captain Luong calmly waded out to the troops and directed the exposed troops to return fire and continue boarding junks. His battalion was then given the mission of securing the northwest corner of Hue Citadel, later discovered to be the North Vietnamese Army Regimental headquarters. When a machinegun crew was killed during an assault, Captain Luong immediately took over the exposed machinegun and laid down a devastating wall of fire. A reinforced North Vietnamese Army company was able to encircle the beleaguered battalion. With the assistance of three armored personnel carriers, Captain Luong again fearlessly led a counterattack with two platoons. He put himself in an exposed position so that he could effectively lead and control the counterattack. While directing an assault against a well-dug-in North Vietnamese Army force, Captain Luong was wounded in the face by shrapnel and immediately lost consciousness. When he regained consciousness, he ignored his profusely bleeding wound and continued to shout orders and encouragement to his attacking troops. Captain Luong was evacuated soon after the breakthrough. After treatment, he returned to his battalion. Captain Luong's presence gave his troops the morale and determination to effectively stop the North Vietnamese Army counterattack. Throughout the Battle of Hue, Captain Luong, through his leadership, courage and fortitude, prevented his command from being overwhelmed by a numerically superior enemy force. Captain Luong's conspicuous gallantry and extraordinary heroic actions are in keeping with the highest traditions of the Army of the Republic of Vietnam and reflect great credit upon himself and the military service.

V-SILVER STAR. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 9 July 1918, a Silver Star for gallantry in action is awarded to:

   Major General Ngo Quang Truong, Army of the Republic of Vietnam, who distinguished himself by gallantry in action against the enemy in connection with the defeat of the VC/NVA TET offensive in Hue, Republic of Vietnam, while serving as Commanding General, 1st Infantry Division, Army of the Republic of Vietnam. During this period, 31 January through 25 February 1968, General Truong led his forces to a decisive victory by his gallant leadership, personal example, and great courage while in constant close contact with the enemy. On 31 January 1968, General Truong rallied the clerical and service personnel on duty at Division Headquarters and personally directed them in repelling repeated attacks by two enemy battalions throughout the day. His calm manner and inspiring leadership were essential to maintenance of the defense by inexperienced and lightly equipped personnel during heavy attacks. General Truong's actions during the day were often performed under intense enemy machinegun and rifle fire from less than 100 meters' range. General Truong's personal bravery, leadership, and gallantry were marked by great distinction and were directly responsible for the successful defense of his headquarters and the preservation of this essential Army of the Republic of Vietnam control headquarters during the most critical phase of the TET offensive. As the battle progressed, General Truong continued to distinguish himself by the most intrepid and inspiring leadership of his outnumbered forces in the citadel. By astute deployments, General Truong achieved tactical superiority in one area of the citadel at a time and completely cleared it on 25 February. His tactical daring was typified by a surprise attack by small forces on 24 February to seize the Imperial Palace, thus avoiding damage to this national shrine and bringing an end to effective enemy resistance. Under General Truong's brilliant guidance, the Army of the Republic of Vietnam forces accounted for 2042 confirmed enemy killed, 33 enemy captured, and 810 enemy weapons captured. General
Truong’s actions were in keeping with the highest traditions of both the United States and Republic of Vietnam military services and reflect great credit upon himself, the Army of the Republic of Vietnam, and the Free World military assistance forces.

VIII. DISTINGUISHED FLYING CROSS. By direction of the President, under the provision of the Act of Congress approved 9 July 1926, a Distinguished Flying Cross for extraordinary achievement while participating in aerial flight is awarded by the Department of the Army to:

Sergeant First Class Donald F. Strickland, United States Army. 10 January 1968 to 14 February 1968.
IX._SOLDIER'S MEDAL. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded posthumously to:

Sergeant First Class William D. Revie, (then Staff Sergeant) United States Army, who distinguished himself by heroism on 1 August 1963 on the Congaree River near Columbia, South Carolina. Sergeant Revie and two other noncommissioned officers were fishing from a boat in the extremely swift moving waters of the Congaree River. The boat struck a partially submerged tree and capsized, throwing all three occupants into the treacherous water. Sergeant Revie anchored the upturned boat in place by holding onto the boat and the tree and aided one of the other men, who could not swim, in climbing upon the boat. As a result, this man's life was saved. Sergeant Revie then noticed that the other man was drifting downstream, apparently unconscious. Sergeant Revie, completely disregarding his own safety, left the safety of the boat and swam downstream in an attempt to save the other man. Sergeant Revie lost his own life in his attempt to save the life of his comrade. Sergeant Revie's heroic conduct is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

X._SOLDIER'S MEDAL. 1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded to:

Captain Bradford M. Brown, Infantry, United States Army, who distinguished himself by heroism on 17 August 1968. While enroute from Fort Wolters, Texas to Fort Rucker, Alabama, Captain Brown observed a pickup truck at an intersection of Interstate Highway 20, Shreveport, Louisiana, which was wrecked and burning. A woman was trapped in the vehicle. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, as there was a good possibility the gas tank might explode, Captain Brown rushed to the truck, broke the windshield, and pulled the woman to safety. He then rendered first aid and assisted local police with the directing of traffic. Only after seeing that the situation was well under control did he report to the Doctor's Hospital for treatment of injuries received during this deed. Quick reaction on the part of Captain Brown and his companion saved the victim from serious injury and possible death. This act of heroism, above and beyond the call of duty, demonstrated unusual courage and reflects great credit upon himself, the United States Army Aviation School, and the United States Army.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded to:

Second Lieutenant James A. Christie, Infantry, United States Army, who distinguished himself by heroism on 17 August 1968. While enroute from Fort Wolters, Texas to Fort Rucker, Alabama, Lieutenant Christie observed a pickup truck at an intersection of Interstate Highway 20, Shreveport, Louisiana, which was wrecked and burning. A woman was trapped in the vehicle. With complete disregard for his own personal safety, as there was a good possibility the gas tank might explode, Lieutenant Christie rushed to the truck, broke the windshield, and pulled the woman to safety. He then rendered first aid and assisted local police with the directing of traffic. Only after seeing that the situation was well under control did he report to the Doctor's Hospital for treatment of injuries received during this deed. Quick reaction on the part of Lieutenant Christie and his companion saved the victim from serious injury and possible death. This act of heroism, above and beyond the call of duty, demonstrated unusual courage and reflects great credit upon himself, the United States Army Aviation School, and the United States Army.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier’s Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded to:

Specialist Four John E. Northrop, United States Army, who distinguished himself by heroism in the course of rescuing a fellow soldier at Paresberg, Germany on 1 August 1968. During this time Specialist Northrop’s unit was assigned the task of unloading armored personnel carriers from railroad flatcars. One of the vehicles accidently lurched backward and began to roll, leaving both Specialist Northrop and a fellow soldier directly in its path. Instead of removing himself from the area of danger, Specialist Northrop moved toward the soldier and pushed him completely off the flatcar. The commission of this brave and unselfish act very possibly saved the life of a fellow soldier, but it caused Specialist Northrop, himself, to be critically injured as a result of being pinned between the oncoming vehicle and another armored personnel carrier behind it. Specialist Northrop’s willingness to sacrifice his own well-being for the benefit of another is in the highest traditions of the military service and reflects great credit upon himself, his unit and his country.

4. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier’s Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded to:

Lieutenant Colonel Charles D. Sarkiss, Infantry, United States Army, who distinguished himself by heroism not involving actual conflict with an armed enemy at about 1350 hours, 8 September 1968 south of Edenton, North Carolina. While crossing the bridge over Albemarle Sound, his attention was directed to people floundering in very rough water after their boat capsized. Colonel Sarkiss first secured from his car and threw to the victim nearest the bridge a foam-rubber pillow. As strong currents continued to take a young boy farther out into the sound, Colonel Sarkiss joined a college student in jumping over 20 feet from the bridge into the choppy water. While he swam to the boy’s aid and kept him afloat until a rescuing boat arrived, the college student swam to the aid of the young man’s father and sister. Colonel Sarkiss’ selfless action in voluntarily jumping from the bridge into very rough water, with total disregard for the considerable hazards involved, directly resulted in saving the life of a young boy. His heroism reflects most creditably on him and the United States Army.

5. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress, approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier’s Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded to:

Sergeant Russell D. Swan, United States Army, who distinguished himself by heroism on 22 October 1968, as a member of the Basic Combat Training Committee Group, while performing his duties as Back-up NCO, Remagen Hand Grenade Range. A live M26A1 fragmentation hand grenade was released too early by a basic combat soldier and landed about 10 feet from Sergeant Swan. With complete disregard for his own safety, Sergeant Swan went immediately to the grenade, picked it up and threw it over a protective wall to his front, the grenade exploding on the other side of the wall before it hit the ground. As a direct result of Sergeant Swan’s speed and efficiency in reacting to the live grenade, the lives of the basic soldier, the Bay NCO, and Sergeant Swan were saved. Sergeant Swan’s heroic conduct is in the highest traditions of the United States Army and reflects great credit upon himself and the military service.

6. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 2 July 1956, a Soldier’s Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded to:

Specialist Five James E. Wesolowski, United States Army, who distinguished himself by heroism on the morning of 30 March 1968 when he, without regard for his personal safety, rendered assistance to two motor vehicle accident victims; personally saving the life of one. While returning from Killeen Base, Texas at approximately 0120 hours, 30 March 1968, on Farm and Market Road 439, Specialist Wesolowski happened upon the scene of an accident. Noting that one of the accident victims, the only one he noticed initially, had stopped breathing, Specialist Wesolowski immediately rendered first aid, checked for serious cuts, and administered artificial respiration. After 20 minutes, this accident victim was breathing normally and had a strong pulse. Upon being advised that the driver of the car was pinned under the vehicle, Specialist Wesolowski directed that onlookers jack up the rear of the car. When he was unable to extricate the second victim, he crawled under the car and started administering artificial respiration. During the 30 minutes he attempted to revive the second victim, the car toppled off the jack twice, pinning him alongside the victim. With total disregard of his personal safety, he continued his attempts to revive the man until such time as the man was officially pronounced dead by a Justice of the Peace. Specialist Wesolowski was commended by civilian authorities for his prompt action in saving one man’s life and for his attempts to save the second man. By his selfless act, and complete disregard for his personal safety, Specialist Wesolowski has brought great credit upon himself and the United States Army.

XI...SOLDIER’S MEDAL. 1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier’s Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded to:

Private Nguyen Van Ba, Army of the Republic of Vietnam, who distinguished himself by valorous actions on the morning of 17 November 1967, while attached to the Intelligence Squad, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 6th Battalion, 60th Infantry, 9th Infantry Division, on a mission to investigate a suspected enemy location. As the patrol was crossing a fast-flowing river, the radiotelephone operator lost his footing in the darkness on the unstable bridge and tumbled into the swift current. Completely disregarding his own personal safety, Private Ba immediately plunged into the river, struggled against the treacherous current and reached the position where the drowning man had gone under. Private Ba quickly found the victim and pulled him to safety with all his equipment. Private Ba’s heroic actions are in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself his unit and the Army of the Republic of Vietnam.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier’s Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded to:
Staff Sergeant Nguyen Van Manh, [redacted], Army of the Republic of Vietnam, who distinguished himself by heroic action on 25 June 1968, while serving as an Army Translator attached to Mobile Advisory Team III-8, Advisory Team 98, United States Military Assistance Command, Vietnam. On this date Sergeant Manh was present in the compound of the 313th Regional Forces Company, Tan Uyen, Bien Hoa, the unit which the mobile advisory team was advising, when an ammunition-handling detail caused the accidental detonation of an 81-mm mortar shell. Other ammunition in the immediate vicinity of the accidental detonation, both 81-mm mortar high explosive and M-72 LAW ammunition, began to burn and subsequently explode, causing numerous casualties in the compound and causing the interior of the compound to become a beaten zone. Immediately upon the first detonation, Sergeant Manh crossed the interior of the compound to the mobile advisory team. Sergeant Manh again crossed the interior of the compound, at great personal hazard, to relay information to the commanding officer of the 313th Regional Forces Company. Thereafter, Sergeant Manh made his way outside the compound and by personal initiative organized a search party to work around the perimeter in an attempt to locate any other surviving casualties. Later, Sergeant Manh was able to make his way back to the mobile advisory team billets, located some 30 feet from the exploding ammunition, by a route offering some limited cover. Several more times Sergeant Manh traversed this route, at considerable risk, relaying vital information. Finally, he assisted in the evacuation of the wounded from the billets, by this route, to a waiting helicopter. Sergeant Manh's courageous and entirely voluntary performance, undertaken at the risk of his life, greatly facilitated the collection, treatment, and evacuation of wounded survivors, including three critically wounded Vietnamese children. Sergeant Manh's heroic action reflects great credit upon himself and upon the Army of the Republic of Vietnam.

3. By direction of the President, under the provisions of the Act of Congress approved 2 July 1926, a Soldier's Medal for heroism not involving actual conflict with an enemy is awarded to:

First Lieutenant Tran Ba Ty, [redacted], Army Republic of Vietnam, who distinguished himself by heroic action on 3 September 1968 when his ambush patrol, which was accompanied by 2 American Advisors, was inadvertently engaged by an Australian unit. Lieutenant Ty's courage was immediately evident as he continually exposed himself to the opposing fire in a successful effort to have his men hold their fire. By having his men hold fire, he saved them from sustaining heavy casualties due to the certain exposure of their positions had they returned fire. This most certainly would have inflicted heavy casualties on the allies. Lieutenant Ty's personal bravery and courage stand as a shining example of the leadership qualities present in the Regional and Popular Forces in the Republic of Vietnam.

XII. BRONZE STAR MEDAL. 1. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 11046, 24 August 1962, a Bronze Star Medal with "V" device for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against hostile forces as awarded to:

Sergeant First Class Billy H. Ingram, [redacted], United States Army, who while a member of Detachment A-312, Company A, 1st Special Forces Group (Airborne), distinguished himself by heroism in connection with military operations involving conflict with a hostile force during the period 19 to 26 September 1964 while serving as an advisor to Camp Buon Briend. During this period the Rhode Strike Force at five camps revolted against the Vietnamese Government and attempted to attack the city of Ban Ma Thuot. Sergeant Ingram was serving as the Senior Medical Aidman of the detachment. When the revolt started he went to the ammunition bunker and wired all of the high explosives for instant detonation to prevent the use of such explosives on the planned rebel assault. Sergeant Ingram then returned to the dispensary to secure all emergency medical supplies to prevent the rebels from taking them for treatment of their anticipated casualties. He maintained constant security on these supplies and kept the commanding officer informed on movements within the camp. These acts were performed while those installations were under rebel control. When it became apparent that the 19 Vietnamese Special Forces personnel were in danger he insisted on putting them under United States protection. When it was suggested by the rebel leader that the United States personnel surrender their weapons, Sergeant Ingram refused and said they would have to kill him first. Throughout the revolt he refused to be contained and under dangerous conditions made periodic trips throughout the camp so as to keep the detachment commanding officer abreast of the situation. Sergeant Ingram’s heroic actions and determination in this hazardous situation were instrumental in breaking the revolt and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army.

2. By direction of the President, under the provisions of Executive Order 11046, 24 August 1962, a Bronze Star Medal with “V” device for heroic achievement in connection with military operations against hostile forces is awarded to:
